

About Place Navigations: A Place for Peace

Editor: Allison Adelle Hedge Coke

Assistant Editors: Katy Gurin & Jasmine Elizabeth Smith

All submissions due by
March 10, 2022

More info at

aboutplacejournal.org/submissions/

With concerted efforts to find pathways to peace, to reclaim and enhance integrated food/health knowledge, to provide portals of knowledge to overcome the storied history of destruction of earth, of her natural resources and her balance with efforts to return the matters of the world to original caretakers for restoration — with these navigations, what possibilities exist?

Call for submissions of poetry, fiction, creative nonfiction, hybrid genre, photography, artwork, sound-art, film/video engaging with the essence of sacred spaces and intentional navigations to protect, preserve, enhance by return to Traditional Ecological Knowledge, Native sciences, Indigenous knowledges. We are looking for revelatory work. Work that propels us to understand how we locate solace, solution. We are interested in the currents and pathways that deliver us to intentional ways of being from the calamitous footprints colonial industry lays.

A special folio call for futuring is also open in this edition. Submissions in any genre or media are welcome to imagine, articulate, and cultivate courses to reconfigure, to sway, to cure what is wrongfully impacted by ecological destruction, white supremacy, settler colonialism, and violence continually seeded by systems and movements configured from dominant, colonial-mindedness, on either side of the binary current state. To speak to pathways and possibilities to educate all with factual truth beyond the myth of the founding of the colonized state. To consider what it would take to shift the state in such a way that fear isn't evoked simply considering the next national election.